Intercollegiate Broadcasting System
Chapin House - Smith College Northampton, Massachusetts

Dear Miss Boselly:

Replying to your letter of December 7, 1947, received during the writer's absence.

Our interest in this matter is wholly limited to the question of maintaining the integrity of the power and lighting distribution system, if it is to be used as suggested for communication purposes.

We have made a few casual inquiries as to the availability of suitable equipment to be attached to these systems for the purpose which you are interested in, and find that there is no standard equipment manufactured for this purpose.
We would therefore, suggest to you that if we are to give any service to you, that you give us a complete outline of what you are proposing so that we can put this up to a manufacturer such as the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, with a view of their developing something that would be suitable for the purpose.

All the engineering specification that would be required would be a description of what is to be done, together with an enumeration of the necessary materials to be used.
Inspection is a matter of routine. As to the cost of this service, it would be based upon a charge of $50.00 per day for an Engineer, and at this moment we are unable to say how many days time it would require. The principal thing, however, is to get a manufacturer to produce suitable equipment to be used in connection with a power system such as we are at present installing at Smith College.

We should be pleased to hear from you at any time regarding this matter and would suggest that in your next communication you give us a rather full description of what you are proposing to do.

Yours very truly,
